Tax Tips for Caregivers

Tax day is upon us and it is time to make sure you have provided all of the correct information you need to complete the forms appropriately and to get the most from your return. As a caregiver you do have some options to increase your return. Did you know that you can claim your loved one as a dependent? Before you do, take some time to consider these questions and how they apply your personal situation and consult your tax preparer.

1) How does your loved one qualify as a dependent?

The person you provide care for does not have to be a relative to be claimed as a dependent. Your loved one qualifies as a dependent on your tax return when you provide a minimum of 50% of support and if your loved one’s annual income is less than $3,950, not including Social Security income. Keep in mind that pensions, interest earned from a savings account, and retirement funds are all considered income.

2) What are some items that can be claimed?

If you have provided your loved one with a minimum of 50% of financial support which includes, but is not limited to, food, shelter, clothing, transportation, assistive devices, in-home care costs, and some home modifications required for medical reasons, just to name a few. Any medical expenses that are not covered through your loved one’s medical insurance such as medication co-pays, deductibles, dental coverage, and if the total annual medical expenses total at least 10% of your adjusted gross income.

So take the time to assess your caregiving situation and remember to keep proof of purchase for your records and to facilitate tax filing. Now that you have this information you can use it to better prepare for 2015.

Combat the Stress

There are different types of stress that we experience that impact our daily lives. Some of the stress we experience can be categorized as Eustress (good stress) or Distress (bad stress). Eustress is the stress that is deemed helpful or giving oneself the feeling of fulfillment. It is the short-term stress, or adrenaline that we feel when we have accomplished something or when we have won a competition. Distress is the stress we should be more concerned with as far as how it affects our health. It can be either short-term or long-term and can cause great pain, anxiety, or concern. When we think about stress we generally are referring to the distress, the bad or negative stress, we experience. Symptoms that may be present with someone who is under chronic stress include, but are not limited to: decline or weakening of the immune system, increase in blood pressure, increase the risk of heart attack or stroke and increase the possibility of feeling anxious or depressed. To avoid some of these symptoms from having a negative impact on your health there are several activities that you can do to reduce your stress levels: 1) Deep Breathing: Take a five minute break to focus on your breathing 2) Listen to Music: Listen to calming music or music attached to positive memories 3) Walk it off: Go for a quiet walk outdoors and feel the sun on your skin 4) Find pleasure: Take a moment to discover what you enjoy doing and what makes you feel good and do it.

Sun Safety

Spring is here and the weather is warming up, drawing us outside. Remember to wear a wide brimmed hat, sunblock and sun glasses to protect your skin and your eyes from the harmful UV rays if you plan to be outside more than 20 minutes. Sun protection is the principal means of preventing premature aging and skin cancer. Look for a sunscreen that protects against both UBV and UVA radiation with an SPF 15 or higher for best results.

Joke of the Month: Dogs vs. Cats

A dog thinks: "Hey, these people I live with feed me, love me, provide me with a nice warm, dry house, pet me & take good care of me…THEY MUST BE GODS!"

A cat thinks: "Hey, these people I live with feed me, love me, provide me with a nice warm, dry house, pet me & take good care of me...I MUST BE A GOD!"
